

Amy Guilfoyle is the Technical Director of Environmental Services at NV5, Inc. with 25 years' experience performing and managing petroleum and hazardous waste site assessments; Phase I/II ESAs; remedial system installation/operation; permitting and compliance tasks. She has managed large, high-profile contamination assessments and remedial implementations at gas stations; commercial and industrial businesses; agricultural properties; and roadway projects. She has also been involved with various municipalities in assisting with the EPA Brownfields program to include grant writing, quarterly reporting, and conducting and supervising assessment activities. As a passionate member of the community, Amy is the former President of the Florida Association of Environmental Professionals, former President of the Central Florida Association of Environmental Professionals, and former Chair of the Metropolitan Environmental Training Alliance.